

Letter to the Editor

Implant-Supported Overdentures: A Removable Option with Security

Dentures are often thought of as bulky appliances that lack stability and move during eating and speaking. This may cause you to avoid situations in which your denture could become loose, such as dinner with friends or singing in the choir.

Using dental implants to retain or support dentures may offer a solution. This creates a more stable prosthesis, giving you improved ability to speak or chew without the constant worry of your dentures coming loose.

It also affords the opportunity to remove the portion of the denture that covers the palate, leading to improved speech, comfort, and taste sensation.

Prosthodontists are dentists who specialize in oral rehabilitation using prosthetics such as implant-supported overdentures. We utilize the most up-to-date methods and technology supported by evidence based dentistry so that you can feel assured you are receiving the best care.

April 7-13 is National Prosthodontics Awareness Week, the perfect time to explore your options for a brand new smile. Visit GoToAPro.org to learn more about what a prosthodontist can do for you.

Sincerely,

Name with credentials

Prosthodontist

City, State